

ECON PBL-2018

Expected Qualities of a group leader

- Organizational Skills
 - Strong organizational skills must be employed to define work projects and set them in motion.
- Conversation
 - The willingness of all team members to communicate ideas and issues is important to the overall success of any project. Conversations must take place in which everyone listens to the speaker and feels free to respond in turn.
- Accurate Perception
 - The group leader must have the ability to accurately perceive what is happening with the project. The group needs to be able to identify issues, assess what is working and what is not and be truthful enough to state when mistakes are made. Clear head knowledge about every subtitle and reasonableness is mandatory in this situation.
- Conflict Resolution Abilities
 - Within the group, there may be instances of conflict. A successful group leader must possess conflict resolution skills to deal appropriately when disputes occur in a professional manner.
- Innovative Thinking
 - This trait will help in presentations which may as well set a good impression and might motivate the team members and other group leaders to think innovatively.
- Sense of Responsibility
 - A good team is composed of members with a sense of responsibility to the team and the project.
- Strong Work Ethic
 - A work team that persists through rough patches to get the job done is the type of group you want to work with. A strong work ethic demonstrated by everyone ensures that this project gets done well and on time. Choose your members wisely.
- Spirit of Appreciation
 - Showing appreciation for the efforts of group members is a quality necessary for the functioning of the group. Encourage your group member to express their thankfulness towards fellow team members on a consistent basis.
